That one of the worst holocausts in the history of the state did not take place was due to the efforts and heroism of the house employes and the first firemen to arrive.

Oscar Jones, the elvator boy, kept his car running through smoke and flames until he emption most of the sixth floor and it was not until the fire put the machinery out of husiness that he quit.

Meanwhile, firemen with scaling ladders and life nets were outside emptying the windows which were filled with frightened men and women in their nightdress, who leaped from the sixth floor, Mrs. Charlotte Harrington actress, who leaped from the sixth floor. # ed the evidence in the case and at the end of his charge it was the belief of all who had heard that he left practically nothing of the elaborate defense constructed in behalf of the quartet for the jury to consider. It was the general opinion of these what is the general opinion of the second to the resumed. the guartet for the jury to consider. It was the general opinion of these was a virtual direction to the furt to convict. The court pointed dut that the entire defense rested on the stories of the four defendants themselves and he commented emphatically on the "peculiar coincidence that esten man's story agreed with that of the man who preceded him on the stand." "There are two sets of four men were, each accusing the other set of this crime," said the judga. "It is for you to carefully study those accusations and say which is the more likely to be true. To do this, you must study the metrics that are involved. "If the story these men cell that Rose took them to the Metropole in order that he might shift the biame from his sheulders such as you should believe? There is a strange similarity in the stories of these men. They give the same description of the strange they say was there." The court then discussed the law of evidence at great length and made it piain that he believed the jurous should decide the case without regard to any bearing the variet might have efther on themselves or on the accused. Cars Loaded With Explosives in J. Chemist, Taken Into Custody at Toms River, N. Y.

> Principal Evidence Against Prisoner Said to be Letter Now in Possession of Buffalo Police

Case of Antonio Mastroiano is Link in Chain of Child Murders

Toms River, N. J., Nov. 19-J. Frank arrested near Whiting, this county, by Sheriff Chilton, today, at the request of the Buffalo authorities, on a charge of murder. . It is alleged that he was whose dismembered body was found in a cesspool at Lackawanna, N. Y. near Buffalo, on Saturday. The sher-Railroad men at the scene declare the wreck was due to a defective switch. They say the locomotive passed over the switch, but that the tender split it, and taking the siding, was torn off the rails by the locomotive, Then the freight cars telescoped into the obstruction and rolled over on their sides.

Wrecking crews dispatched from New Haven went to work on the deiff went to Cheswick, just outside of under arrest, bringing him to this. town, where he will be held until the authortiles arrive from Buffalo.

Hickey denied positively any knowledge of the murder of the boy. He denounced his arrest as an outrage and said he would be able to prove his innocence very easily.

The arrest was made on the telegraphed order of Chief of Police Regan, of Buffalo, who said that Hickey was employed at the Lackawanna Steel Company's plant at the time the Josephs boy was missed, and that his handwriting corresponds with that of the writing on the postal cards in the case. lown, where he will be held until the from and to this city in which the New Haven-Botsford branch, as well as the Naugatuck division, were involved.

It was about 10:30 that the Naugatuvk division train, bound north from this city at 3:15 pulled out for the wreck, and even then the passengers were forced to walk around the obstruction and board a train made up at the other side of the cross-over. The Federal Express, which of late has given Bridgsport the cold shoulder, and has travelled via the Poughkeepsis bridge, wandered into Bridgsport about, 6 o'clock this morning. The big red cars of the Pennsylvania line, an unacoustomed sight to the residents of Trumbull, Long Hill, and Stopney, made the natives phink a circus train was pulling through.

The Federal travels from New Haven to Derby Junction made the east bound Federal, the train wrecked at the Fairfield avenue viaduct last year, take the trip this morning via the Berkshire all the way to Bridgeport, instead of branching from the wreck crept into the schedule on the main line holding up some of the trains for several minutes.

is now believed to be a matter of a few hours.

The arrest of the slayer will disclose, the police say, a chain of boy-murders extending through the East. There is hardly a single large northeastern city that has not experienced, within the last decade, the strange disappearance of a small boy whose murdered body has been found days or weeks later, each body bearing the marks of murder similar in method to those of the Josephs and Kruk lads.

Among the murders the police say may be laid to one man are:

Joseph Ricac Kruk, Central Park, New York, December, 1902.

Antonio Mastrolanno, Bridgeport, 1907.

Robert Lomas and Arthur Shipley, Highbridge Park, New York, Jan. 15, Highbridge Park, New York, Jan. 15, 1910.

Joseph Josephs, Lackawanna, 1911.

Bridgeport, Conn., has never cleared up the mystery of the murder of 9-year-old Antonio Mastroianno, whose mutilated body was found in the woods northeast of the Lakeview Home, the city almshouse, during the fall of 1907. The Mastroianno boy disappeared from home. Lured far from his parents' home by a well dressed stranger who supplied him with candies, grapes and other sweets, he was enticed into a lonely section of the woods, where he met an indescribable death.

Men gathering chestnuts, almost other sweets, he was enticed into a lonely section of the woods, where he met an indescribable death.

Men gathering chestnuts almost stumbled over the little corpse, days later, and when the police and medical examiner, Dr. F. B. Downs, made an inspection of the corpse they found a shoe string tightly drawn about the little throat, so taut that it was at first undiscovered, buried in the folds of the tender flesh. An autopsy revealed that death was due to strangulation, and added harrowing details of abuse of the child which proved plainly that the murder was the work of one of disordered mind.

Experts in criminology maintain that the slayer of the Josephs boy—and they have no doubt but that the same man committed many similar crimes—is an abnormal type. The man is afflicted, they say, with a form of sexual perversion that finds expression in murder lust. The mulilations of the bodies of the tender victims prove, they maintain, that the man when seized with his child-murder frenzy, realizes the irrepressible desire to slay growing upon him, that he takes it for granted that the greed for child-murder must be sated, and they agree with the police it is likely to avoid detection he goes far away from his accustomed haunts.

Mrs. Josephs, mother of the murdered boy, was reported as still in a critical condition, today. She is kept continually under the influence of opiates and the full exent of the sufferings of her child have been mercifully kept from her. The contents of the two last postal cards received from the murderer were learned, today. They detail the meeting with the boy sond them tall how the boy was them tall how the boy sond th from the murderer were learned, to-day. They detail the meeting with the boy and then tell how the boy was disposed of after the crime was committed and how the body appear-ed when the murderer took his last look at it.

Chief of Police Glison said, today, that as a result of comparisons has Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 19-Five persons were killed and nearly a dozen injured in a head-on collision of two Seaboard Air line fast express trains near Granite, N. C., early today. The W. W. Fasion, engineer, of Raleigh, J. G. Gray, colored, fireman, C. H. the slayer of little Joseph Josephs, Beckham, engineer of Raleigh, James Ruffin, colored, fireman, . V. Priddy, express messenger, Boykins, va.

Seriously injured: J. T. Bryant and All Mearz, baggagemasters, both of Richmond, Va.; H. F. Coates, express messenger, leg broken, Richmond; G. G. Shanonhouse, conductor, Richmond. W. B. Tilman, conductor, Richmond. The north bound train, with Engineer Beckham, was running at high speed to make up lost time when it cashed into the south bound train. Both trains, heavy with passengers, were running 40 or 50 miles an hour. The shock of their impact tore up several hundred feet of track and snapped off telegraph poles.

Meanwhile, the wreckage caught fire and the bodies of the engineers and their firemen were incinerated. It was several hours before rescue work was started The details here were meagre but it was assumed the confusion in orders for a freight train caused the collision. The two trains Seriously injured: J. T. Bryant and Special rescue trains were immediately rushed from Raleigh and Richmond. Telephone reports here say that a surprisingly small number of passengers received injury and these only slight bruises and contusions. The fact that both trains carried in the forward part of their makeup an express car and diner undoubtedly saved the lives of scores of passengers. The first cars next the engine on both trains were literally splintered.

The north bound train was crowded with persons who had gone to Raleigh, lest night, to lear W. J. Bryen speak. The Commoner had intended to take the southbound train for Savannah, today.
